ROSEMOUNT

Rosemount is at Forkland. It is a large home of 20 rooms that was started in 1830 and completed in 1835. Lumber for the construction of this famous home was cut by slaves and pinned in place by wooden pegs and planed by hand. The mantles are of Italian marble and it's furniture from France. It is known as the "Grand Mansion of Alabama," and is the State's only antebellum mansion opened the year round to visitors.

About People and Things

By C. B. McDowell

RETURNS FROM HOSPITAL

M. C. Maddox returned Tuesday from Enterprise hospital where he underwent treatment for two weeks for a severe attack of arthritis. Mr. Maddox said Wednesday that he is still quite sore but was feeling much better than he has for a long time. He said he took 40 shots. He told the doctor they must have been boiling or freezing, he couldn't tell which, they hurt so much.

STEPHEN MADDOX SICK

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. McDowell, Roy E. McDowell, Mrs. Mary Newton and son Robert, visited Mr. and Mrs. Mike Maddox in Andalusia Sunday afternoon. They found that Mr. Maddox had gone to Birmingham where his youngest brother, Stephen, was to undergo a brain operation Monday. Mr. and Mrs. Maddox were Elba residents for several years and were prominently identified with church and business activities.

WASHINGTON BUSY

M. C. Russ, for many years in the insurance business in Elba, now in Washington, D. C., is visiting his wife and other relatives here. Mrs. Russ has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Ham for some time and intends to remain until May. Mr. Ham stated that the nation's capital is crowded to overflowing.

BAPTISMAL SERVICE

A number of converts were baptized Sunday night at the Elba Baptist Church, attended by a large congregation. The service was as an aftermath of the week's revival which closed Sunday week.

MRS. FARRIS IMPROVING

Mrs. J. J. Farris, who has been quite ill for several months at the home of her daughter on Brantley Drive, is reported to be gradually improving. Mr. & Mrs. Joe Hutchison and daughter Peggy. Mrs. I. A. Hutchison Mrs. Joe Adams and children, Mike and Pat, all of Panama City, Fla. visited in the Farris home the first of the week. Mrs. E. L. Alford of Chipley, Fla. returned home after a visit with Mrs. Farris and other Elba relatives.

METHODISTS SAY THANKS

We wish to speak a word of appreciation to several people who have greatly helped us in the building of our church annex. This building was a pay-as-you-go enterprise and is free from debt. Our Mayor L. P. Mullins was a great help to us in our building program. He furnished lumber at a big discount and assisted in various ways. We want him to know we appreciate all he has done to help. Paul Windham gave us the use of a power saw free which saved a good amount. We thank him for his assistance.

We owe a debt of gratitude to Square Freeman and his father, W. D. Freeman, who several times contributed cash. When these men began construction of the building, they said they were going to build the very best possible for size and space. They certainly kept their promise.

We also appreciate the work done by our committee which had authority to go ahead with actual construction. On the actual construction the work of Luther Vaughan, Harold Deal and Dana B. Perdue is to be commended in this regard. Mr. Vaughan spent many hours in working and advising on the job and many times left his own business to attend the Lord's business in this connection.

We can't thank all who should be thanked. But in conclusion our thanks go to each one on the building committee and to each person who has had a part in accomplishing this fine work.

Fred L. Davis, Pastor

TRUMAN AUTOMOBILES

J. D. Smith was asking his friends Monday morning if they had seen any of the new Truman cars—if was uncertain if they would run or not.

While Capt. Perdue was absent, W. F. Fortner has been operating the Elba Milling Co. plant in West Elba. J. C. Fleming, his partner, stated they have not determined what disposition will be made of the company now that Capt. Perdue is going into the service.

One meeting night will be set aside to feed the football team, the Lions Club decided at its regular meeting Tuesday night at the high school. A definite date for the dinner was not set.

Other business transacted by the club was the appointment of a nominating committee to pick a slate of officers for the coming years. Flournoy Whitman, Tommie Thomason and L. P. Mullins were named on the committee.

A standing vote of thanks was given to the P.-T. A. mothers for consistently serving such good meals to the club.

Formation of a club of ball team was discussed as was the coming state convention in Birmingham on May 6-7 and 8

New members welcomed into the club were Grady Wheeler, Liberty National Life Insurance representative here, and Ellis Brazelton, head of the loan department at Emergency Aid.

Capt. Frank Perdue Passes Physical Test

Capt. Frank D. Perdue went to Brookley Field, Mobile, last week where he passed his physical examination and as a reserve officer will soon be inducted into the Air Force. While in Mobile he was taken ill and a doctor diagnosed it as flu. When he came home and was taken to the hospital, the ailment was described as pneumonia. He is now at his home in West Elba and is recuperating satisfactorily.

While Capt. Perdue was absent, W. F. Fortner has been operating the Elba Milling Co. plant in West Elba. J. C. Fleming, his partner, stated they have not determined what dispositions will be made of the company now that Capt. Perdue is going into the service.

Mrs. J. W. Kendrick Honored by Beta Club

Mrs. J. W. Kendrick, sponsor of the Beta Club at Elba High was named to the state council of the organization at a meeting of the group in Birmingham last week. It is quite unusual for a teacher to be put on the board that is almost entirely made up of college presidents and high school principals. The Beta Club is a national organization of high school students who rank in the upper portion of their class scholastically.

Being named to the council was an honor bestowed upon Mrs. Kendrick for her long association with the Beta Club in Elba and recognizes the hard work she has done year after year with the organization.

J. M. Garrett Will Not Be Called Into Army

Maj. J. M. Garrett says he is now an honorary member of the U. S. Air Force. He went to Maxwell Field last week for a physical examination and was not able to pass because of a heart condition. A civilian doctor later told him he was in good shape and would last a good length of time yet. John is used to these scares as 20 years ago a doctor told him he had cancer and would only live a year. An operation gave him a permanent cure but the doctor who told him of the cancer died shortly thereafter when he underwent an operation for a similar condition. In view of all this Mr. Garrett optimistically predicts he will continue to manage Garrett Motor Company in Elba and thinks he may still live to be the oldest citizen in town.

Johnny Farris Named New Grid Captain

Last Thursday afternoon, before the intra-squad game between the Blacks and Golds Johnny Farris was elected captain and Doug Marler was chosen co-captain for next year's football games. Both will be seniors and have starred for the Tigers for the past three years. Farris has played at center and Marler has been a linesman, although he has been used in the backfield during spring practice. Both are popular with the players and fans.

BASEBALL SUNDAY

There will be a baseball game Sunday afternoon on the local diamond between Elba and Zion Chapel. Game time is 2 o'clock.

COTTON CLAN PLAID

All set for a highland fling is this summer ensemble by Dorothy Cox of McMullen in Hope Skillman's sheer cotton tartan plaid. Its finely pleated stole loops through the belt to form a chic, asymmetrical skirt ruffle. Clan plaids are among the favorite summer fabrics, the National Cotton Council notes.

Rev. S. T. Harris Holds Methodist Services

Rev. S. T. Harris, superintendent of Troy District, occupied the pulpit at the Elba Methodist church Sunday night. His sermon stressed the fact that although the Methodist church is the largest numerically in the nation, it is far down the list in amount of money contributed per capita. He said, because of the huge membership and cooperative spirit, he is convinced the church has great responsibilities in these times.

Supt. Harris conducted the final quarterly conference immediately following the service. I was shown that a large amount of money has been raised during the past year and many improvements made, including a new two-story church annex.

The annual conference of Alabama and Northwest Florid conference will be held at Huntingdon College, Montgomery beginning May 30. Mrs. Harri Murphree was elected delegate to the conference and Mrs. Prescott was named substitute delegate.

Firemen Called Out To Hunt Lost Boy

The six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Cheshire, who reside east of Elba near the Elba-Samson highway, frightened his parents Monday evening after being away from home for two hours. At the request of his parents, the fire siren was sounded but before the firemen could take up the search, the boy was reported home. It is reported the boy became indignant at something his parents had done and ran away. He hid under a neighbors house until dark when he became afraid and returned home.

SPECIAL W. M. U. GROOP MEETING AT ALBERTON

The state W. M. U. field worker, Miss Florence Thommason will be guest speaker at a group meeting at Alberton Church on April 19. The program begins at 10 o'clock and finishes at noon. Lunch will be served by the hostess church.

THE COUNTERFEITER

40 Years Ago in Elba

C. B. McDowell

Wednesday night at the regular conference, the Baptist church selected the Knight place on the old D. C. Collins residence lot, for the location of the new building soon to be built. There was much interest and zeal manifested at the meeting which was well-attended. Rev. D. P. Lee is working assiduously and faithfully for the erection of the new church and deserves much commendation for the success he has attained A committee composed of Claude Riley, H. R. Bradley and Y. W. Rainer was appointed to negotiate the purchase of the lot selected. Rev. Lee announced that on the third Sunday in the month books of subscription will be opened and a committee appointed to solicit additional subscriptions for the new building.

It is understood already what the subscriptions of many will be and there is no doubt about the success of the undertaking. Many Methodists and Presbyterians attended the meeting and showed deep interest in the matter. Rev. Lee will soon procure plans and specifications for the new structure and erecting the building will be in the course of construction.

P. J. Ham, one of Elba's oldest and most prominent citizens, surrounded by his children, grand- and great-grandchildren and a few friends, are having a family picnic today at the old Carroll place, five miles north of Elba on the Troy road. It has been the custom of the family to have, annually, a picnic at this place, which is the old home of Mr. Ham's first wife, now deceased, and they look forward with happy anticipation each year to this occasion. This being his 70th birthday and finding him whole and full of business activity, is indeed a day of rejoicing for his family and friends.

The Sacred Harp Singing Society met at the Dyess School House April 2. Class called to order by the chairman, J. F. Patterson, prayer by Rev. T. J. Brooks. Singers were Bea Wood, Elery Wilson, Charlie Helms, T. J. Brooks, G. L. Beck, J. F. Brooks, A. M. Caraway, V. M. Brooks, C. E. Tindol, H. Faust and J. M. Tindol. J. N. Hurston served as secretary.

Elba needs a business men's club. One was organized some time ago, but we never hear anything from it now. There is much work for such an organization.

Petitions are being circulated asking the court of county commissioners to call an election to vote on the question of floating bonds to build good roads in the county. The commissioner will meet April 29 to decide on it.

Cotton is edible, this pretty homemaker shows, as she places squares of cottonseed oil margarine on her luncheon table. Nearly 100 per cent of all cottonseed oil is used in various food products, the National Cotton Council reports

Mrs. Dana B. Perdue Resigns as Teacher

Mrs. Dana B. Perdue has resigned as teacher of expression in the Elba schools. She had been teaching here for 27 years and from point of service was the oldest instructor in the city schools. She said she had hoped to finish out the present term, but ill health forced her to resign. Many of her pupils have grown to manhood and womanhood and gone on to finish their college course.

Two other teachers in the school who are still on the job after many years of service are Mrs. Sam B. Young and Mrs. Wesley Ham. Mrs. Young has been teaching 26 years and Mrs. Ham for 25.

Elba Motor Court Is Adding Six More Units

The Elba Motor Court, located on Elba-Troy highway is undergoing an expansion. F. H. Murphree, proprietor, announces that the eight units, built last year, have become inadequate to care for the growing business. The concrete block garage adjoining the court to the north, has been purchased from Crosby and McCollough and is being remodeled. Six units are being constructed, equipped with all modern conveniences. This will make 14 units in all. The court is a popular stopping place for many travelers, who arrive at all times of the day and night, Mr. Murphree states.

Rehearsals Starting For Senior Class Play

Elba High seniors have begun rehearsing for their annual play which will be given Friday, May 11. The play selected was "Tempest and Sunshine" by Ned Albert. The plot is the same as that of Mary J. Holmes novel by the same name. The seniors taking part in the play are Lewis Merrell Brooks, Brian Turman, Billy Head, Wilson Dyess, Doris Carpenter, Helen Goodson, Joy Parker, Gloria Whatley, Belle Lou Plant, Dorothy Gullmore, Ann Watkins and Evelyn Rainey.

Missing Music Sheets Sought by Instructor

Band director James Patrenos requests that all former band members or their parents go through their homes in search of missing musical scores for the high school band. In many cases parts of the orchestration are gone and it is impossible to have the entire band play the piece. Twenty-three books for beginners are also missing. These are badly needed for instructional purposes. All the music is the property of the Elba band library and was loaned to students while they were in the band. Funds are not available to buy other music. Mr. Patrenos requests it be returned to him at the high school.

Policemen Sell Blood To Help Fellow Officer

ST. PAUL, MINN.—St. Paul policemen are doing something unique for a unique fellow officer, Alfred E. Big Al Jakobson.

Jakobson had one of his lungs removed recently in Rochester, Minn. His officer friends made a deal with the Rochester hospital, which billed Jakobsen for $600. The hospital agreed to take their blood at $25 a pint and apply it to Jakobson's bill.

Four officers went to Rochester, contributed a pint of blood apiece and knocked $100 off the bill. Other officers are planning to follow suit.

Big Al—he's 6 feet 7—is a familiar figure in the St. Paul loop, where he has been a traffic officer most of the time since 1929.

Then Big Al developed another idea, after night motorists almost clipped him a couple of times.

At night he'd halt traffic with a wave of the red, then wave them on by turning and opening his hand.

But more unique among policemen was Jakobson's refusal of a promotion to detective.

Big Al had a good reason He was studying law nights. If he took the detective rank he'd have to quit his studies to serve a night shift now and then.

He kept his patrolman's rank, worked days and studied nights, right up to the time he became ill.

Just before he got sick he passed an examination for the rank of detective lieutenant. He was certified to that position, but never has had a chance to work at it.

CHAPTER XVI

"I suppose your plan is best," she conceded unwillingly. "At that I don't imagine staying here another twenty-four hours will—" Will kill me, she had intended to finish the sentence. A tremor of fear stopped her. Her careless words approached the truth too closely.

"I'll do as you say," she whispered quickly to Fay and ran from the room. Cleve had paused on the white portico to speak to Carol, who, hands clasped about her knees, sat in the sun on the top step. She looked up as Dorinda neared her.

"Little Morrow was in dreamland when I went back," she explained, "so I didn't linger. But I suppose I shouldn't stay away too long." She rose reluctantly, stretching.

"Keep her outside," she advised Cleve as she left them. He looked after her, admiration in his eyes.

"Darned pretty girl," he commented. He laughed as his gaze came back to Dorinda's face. "Only thing to cure her blushes."

"There's something about a uniform—I mean a nurse's uniform," Dorinda said dreamily. But her gaiety sounded forced.

Cleve caught her hand, his hard brown fingers warm against hers. "By the way, you haven't reconsidered that suggestion I made last night?"

Carol Tells Her Belief Something Very Wrong

Her words seemed to make no impression upon him. He looked down at her, half-smiling. "You're such a little nut," he said tenderly. "Listen, Dorinda, I've fixed up something for you. Since you scorn my proposition to make an honest woman of you, how about a visit to my house? Maybe when you see me on my own home grounds and come to know me better, you'll have a change of heart. I bear a message from my mother, asking you to spend a few days at the Adams domicile. How about it?"

"I'll have to ask—" she began.

"You'll have to ask Uncle Edward," he mocked. "I'll ask him myself. Your pretty nurse tells me he's not in so I'll telephone him later in the day. But get your grip packed for I'm taking you home with me after the inquest tomorrow."

After the inquest. After the inquest tomorrow she'd be on her way to Los Angeles. She couldn't tell Cleve that, though.

Edward did not come home until late in the afternoon. He ignored his previous request for a talk with her. But she didn't care, she had no desire to see him now.

She went to her room early that night. Carrie came in with her hot milk at nine o'clock. There was a bond between herself and the maid, Dorinda felt.

But tonight, to Dorinda's surprise, Carrie's eyes avoided hers. She fidgeted uneasily and seemed anxious to leave. But she stopped on her way out, her big hand grasping the door knob, and said strangely, "I try to do what I think's right, Miss. I hope you won't hold anything against me. All I want's for you to be safe."

She was gone before Dorinda could ask what she meant.

The black hands of the clock moved inexorably onward. At twelve she put down her book. Surely danger was safely locked out tonight. Perhaps she could sleep. But just as she untied the blue robe, a low tapping sounded at the door.

Dorinda stood motionless, cold with fright. "Who's there?" she faltered, and felt herself relax as Carol called softly, "Let me in. Quick, Dorinda. I've got to talk to you."

She pushed against the panels as Dorinda turned the key in the lock as if she could not wait for the click of the latch. She came inside swiftly, shut the door behind her and leaned back against it. She wore a dark coat and hat and had a black scarf tied about her hair. Her face was very pale.

"Dorinda," she said, her tone low in spite of its harshness. "I was wrong. There is something queer going on in this house. You're getting out of here now, tonight. And I'm going with you!"

"No," she whispered thickly "No." She put her hand against her throat, feeling fear an icy trickle along her spine.

"I tell you I know what I'm talking about." Urgency was behind the tones Carol tried to make even. "Get hold of yourself. You can't go to pieces now." She came close to the girl, her fingers biting into the flesh beneath the sleeve of the blue robe. She shook Dorinda roughly.

"This may mean your life. You can't—just give up. You've got to get dressed and get away from this house." Carol's face, not more than a foot away, was set in stiff planes. Her black eyes were grim and narrow.

"But, Carol, why—who—?"

TIGHT ROPE
BY

CHAPTER I—Stella Moore, masquerading as Dorinda LaCroix because she has been told it will help keep alive Dorinda's aged grandmother, is accosted by a man she has met before and who suspects her disguise. Dorinda died before rescue came during a shipwreck as she and her uncle fled Paris when the Nazis overran it. Stella Moore has become Dorinda to the LaCroix household.

CHAPTER III—Dorinda (as she is called henceforth) has developed a real affection for the old lady she is deceiving, but finds Lana, the daughter of Edward's aunt Harriet, distasteful because of her selfishness and greed. Mr. Thornbyke, fellow guest Edward and co-conspirator in the plot, speculates on the desirability of ending the masquerade. Romance begins to stir between Dorinda and Cleve Adams, a neighbor.

CHAPTER IV—Deputy Sheriff Hawley questions Stella as to her whereabouts after reporting the death of the salesman, Taylor, who had recognized Dorinda as Stella Moore. Taylor apparently was killed in an automobile accident, but the sheriff's office sees "some queer things" about the supposed accident. A "yellow haired" girl with Taylor figures as mystery woman in case.

CHAPTER V—Dorinda considers giving up pose and confesses to Edward's audience, but respects Edward's wishes that he not tell Cleve unless her s pose is discovered.

CHAPTER VI—Grandmother begins peculiar behavior, asks to see scar which rea Dorinda received on wrist when cut by a broken perfume bottle as a child.

CHAPTER VII—Fay tries to avert Grandma's examination of Dorinda's wrist, but the old lady holds on and discovers there is no scar—that the pretended Dorinda is an imposter. Edward attempts to make Grandmother Thornbyke believe him but fails and she has a severe heart attack. Dr. Evans is called and warns Edward that the shock might be fatal to the old lady. Cleve, the nurse, reports the death of Grandmother Thornbyke.

CHAPTER VIII—Carol expresses fear she'll be blamed because she took a nap while on duty. As the maid, Carrie, begins stripping covers from grandmother's bed, Dorinda notices lipstick smears on the pillow case and suspicion is aroused concerning how the old lady died.

CHAPTER IX—She reports her fears to Edward, who ridicules them. The family attend grandmother's funeral. Dorinda plans an afternoon at the beach with Cleve Adams and Carrie fixes lunch for the party.

CHAPTER X—Anne Delahay arrives in time to join the beach party. She is outfitted in one of Dorinda's swim suits. Dorinda, Cleve and Anne go for a swim and dress, and Nils (Anne) Darnell thinks she saw a flash of what might have been a woman's yellow suit at cliff top just before boulder fell. Dr. Evans decides to call in the sheriff.

CHAPTER XI—Dorinda is puzzled by mysterious footsteps she heard in upstairs hall when house was supposedly empty. Dorinda tells of seeing flash of yellow hair at cliff top just before boulder crashed out life of Anne Delahay. Carrie tells how a faked telephone call lured her away from the house on [illegible]

CHAPTER XII—Sheriff Poole launches investigation into Anne's death. Carrie poses possibility that whoever pushed boulder was trying to kill Dorinda, for now Dorinda, since Anne was wearing one of Dorinda's swim suits. Edward wires for his mother's attorney and Sheriff Poole wants to know about Carol Hughes' whereabouts the day Anne was killed. Carol tells of having spent day and night with a nurse friend.

CHAPTER XIII—Because of fear and and nervous tension, Dorinda keeps her door locked, a fact discovered by Fay Randy, the pup given her by Cleve Adams, suddenly disappears and Dorinda feels an eerie menace as she goes to the attic door and her search for the pup.

CHAPTER XIV—Cleve and Dorinda, while on a trip to town, see Edward and a "blonde woman" pass by in a car. Dorinda notes the woman has "yellow hair" and is greatly disturbed. Cleve begins to sense danger to Dorinda and warns her to be extra careful.

CHAPTER XV—Morrow, the lawyer, is mysteriously stricken, but recovers. This newest event in what seems to be a foreboding chain to Dorinda, creates added fear of further deadly attacks by an unknown enemy. Fay agrees with Dorinda that perhaps it would be better if the latter should leave Thornbyke house.

"There's no time to talk about it now. . .We've got to hurry, hurry." The nurse emphasized her words with another shake. "Come on, dear, dress. I'll help you."

"It isn't real." Dorinda thought She tried to hurry but her fingers were slow and fumbling. "It's only a dream, a horrible dream I'll wake up soon."

She didn't wake. She was dressed, the heavy coat buttoned about her.

Carol's hand on her arm urged her on. They were at the front door. Carol unfastened the chain and turned the key slowly and carefully.

The moonlight lay like silver frost across the grass, turning their immediate world into a black and white theatrical scene devoid of depth or color. Carol's face was a featureless silvery oval.

"The garage is so far from the house no one will hear us," she said. She breathed hard as she slid the wide door upward. "I've got the extra car keys. Your uncle keeps them in the drawer of the hall table."

She looked over her shoulder toward the house. Dorinda's eyes followed hers. When they had first come into the moonlight, Dorinda had looked up at the south wall of the house. It had been dark then, the windows blind, closed eyes. But now, on the second floor, an oblong of radiance broke the symmetry and stared down on them like a seeing golden orb which followed and noted every movement.

Carol saw the light, too. She raised he head uneasily. "Hurry, Dorinda!" she said again. "We'll take the roadster."

They followed the curves of the driveway, they passed through the gates into the road. Carol turned the car to the left.

"Can you drive, Dorinda?" she asked abruptly.

Tells of Her Hearing Strange 'Whisperings'

"Well, you're probably better at it than I am. I didn't want to ask you to get us started." Carol gave a short laugh that held no merriment. "But when you've calmed down a little—or maybe I mean waked up, you've seemed sort of paralyzed, you know—I'm going to ask you to take the wheel. I don't feel too confident about my own ability. Wait a while though, I seem to be getting along all right so far."

"Where are we going?"

"Los Angeles," Carol told her. "We ought to make it by three-thirty. That friend of mine—you remember the one I stayed with before—she'll take us in."

In spite of her admitted inexperience, Carol drove rapidly. They came to Trentville, rolled down the main street, where the little shops, closed and shuttered now, dreamed in the moonlight.

"Carol," she said softly. "Aren't you going to tell me?"

"Tell you what?" Carol leaned forward in her seat, looking intently at the road ahead.

"What you heard. How you knew —something was going to happen to me."

She felt the deep sigh that shook Carol's slight body. "It's hard for me to talk and drive at the same time. Or maybe it's that I hate to talk about it. It scares me."

Carol's voice was only a thread of sound, barely discernible above the hum of the motor. "I'd given Morrow his medicine," she began abruptly, "and tucked him up for the night. Then I went to my room and thought I'd read for a while. It was late before I knew it, half past eleven. I decided I'd take another look at Morrow before I turned in—he isn't sick enough to need much care but he's a fussy patient and the more attention he gets the better he likes it.

"Well, he was awake and declared he was hungry, so, when I couldn't talk him out of it, I said I'd go downstairs and get him a glass of milk. It was so quiet out in those half-lit halls—you know how you sort of tiptoe around so as not to break the stillness. Anyway, I didn't make a sound. I pushed open the rear door of the hall but it swung back shut—you know how it is. I didn't turn on the light—I know where the ice-box is and I got my milk and started back. It was just when I got back to the swinging door—I had my hand against it—that I heard what I heard."

Carol's arm was tense against Dorinda's. "Voices on the other side of the door. They were so close that if I'd pushed even an inch or two more I'd have struck them. Your name was what stopped me. I just waited there and listened.

"I couldn't hear much—they were whispering, you understand. Just your name and the words 'accident' and 'tonight.' It doesn't sound like much but is was terrible, Dorinda. Suddenly I knew you were right; that it hadn't really been an accident before. I just stood there and shook. It was a wonder I didn't drop the milk.

"I waited for a little after the whispering stopped and when I peeked out and saw the hall empty, I hurried upstairs as if Satan himself were after me."

She gave a forlorn little chuckle. "Morrow never did get his milk. I went to my room and walked around in circles trying to decide what to do.

Carol, Dorinda Flee During the Night

"At first I thought I'd call the sheriff. But I was liable to get bumped off myself while I was phoning, and anyway, if he did come, what good would it do? Mr. Thorndyke would look at him in that 'my good man' sort of way he has and explain I'd had a nightmare and Mr. Poole would probably apologize and withdraw leaving whoever wanted to murder us to do it at leisure. Look how they've dropped that case of your friend. I tell you, in a small town like this if you belong to one of the old families and have money you can get away with anything. You're sort of like royalty."

"I'm safe now," Dorinda told herself over and over. "I'm safe." Her lips were close pressed to control their trembling.

She made her voice steady. "Carol, it wasn't—it wasn't Edward out there, was it?"

Carol hesitated, half turning her head in the darkness to look at Dorinda. "Honestly, I don't know," she said slowly. "I don't think so. I didn't think so then. But people whispering—they all sound alike. You can't tell whether they're men or women. For some reason I thought they were women. But I could be wrong."

Dorinda's hand pressed the arm so close to her own. "I'm—I'm grateful, Carol."

"You needn't be. . . ."

She broke off sharply. The car swerved as the wheel jerked in her hands. "Dorinda, I've been watching the rear view mirror. There's been headlights from another car reflected almost all the way we've come. I thought we'd lost them a while back but now I see them again. Maybe it's a different car. It doesn't necessarily mean someone is trailing us. But there's so little traffic on this road —especially at night—"

"It's no use," Carol whispered between set teeth. "I can't keep that up. I'll wreck us both. And anyway, I haven't gained anything. That car is just as close as before. Maybe it's not following us. I wish I knew."

Dorinda, watching over one shoulder, could see in the distance two yellow lights, like bright round eyes. But another car—it didn't prove someone was following them.

"They're after us or they're not." Carol had the manner of one who has made a decision. "We'll find out. Here's what we'll do, Dorinda. A few miles farther on there's an all-night hamburger stand. I'd planned on stopping for coffee in any event. I don't want to take any chance of either of us falling asleep at the wheel. The stand is a quarter mile from the main road and if the car behind us turns off there too, we can be pretty sure it's us they're following."

Five minutes later Carol gave an exclamation of relief. "Here's the road. Look, you can see the lights of the stand from here." And then, after a pause, "Did they make the turn, Dorinda?"

"They've made it," she asserted faintly. "Carol, they are following us. And the car's closer. A lot closer."

"Well, we've got this far anyway." Carol guided the roadster into the empty space in front of the small eating house and stopped the car with a jerk.

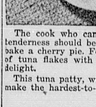
It was a little place, glass-fronted, with half a dozen stools, all vacant now, lined up in front of an oil-cloth-covered counter. Behind the counter a glass pot of coffee simmered on an electric grill; a shimmer of heat rose from a black, greasy-looking metal sheet over a burning gas ring. The rattle of dishes came from the kitchen at the rear. There was at least an illusion of safety here.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
By DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN
SCRIPTURE: Genesis 12—17.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Hebrews 11:8-12.

'We Are His People'

Lesson for April 15, 1951

WHEN A Christian today in church repeats the ancient Psalm, "We are His people," if he knows what he is saying he is associating himself with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. The God of the Bible is not a "great first cause" or a "principle" of any sort. First, last and always He is the God of the Covenant. Over and over again He is called the "God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob."



Dr. Foreman

The stories of these men are not mere campfire tales of legendary ancestors. They are the story of how these men were related to God in a solemn covenant; they were "God's people" in a special way. In the New Testament we find the strange yet stirring declaration that God was "not ashamed to be their God."

* * *

The Living God

THE FULL meaning of what the Bible has to tell us about God can be discovered best by coming toward an understanding of what the covenant idea means. What is meant by the Covenant God, one who makes covenants with men?

First of all, it means that God is living. He is not a mere observer of events with which He has nothing to do. If we could put it into modern American language, God does not sit in the bleachers; He plays the game. He does not, as it were, read the newspapers to see how the war against evil goes on; He is out on the field directing the battles.

God is not something to be talked about, a proulem, an X; He is not a creation of men's minds, God is not a name for an idea. He is more alive than any one who thinks about Him, He is more real than any who ever doubted Him.

* * *

Only Persons Make Covenants

THE GREAT difference between things and people is that people have wills of their own. And God is a person. You will not find in the Bible any statement directly saying that God is personal, or a person; but every time a Covenant between God and man is mentioned, the idea of personality is there.

No one who ever knew God would think of calling Him "It" even with capital letters. If we say "He" about God it is not because we think He is masculine; it would be quite as true to call Him Mother-God as Father-God.

As Dr. Reynolds, Presbyterian missionary to Korea, has pointed out, all the best women we associate with motherhood are in the Bible attributed to God. So if we call God "He" what we are emphasizing is that He is personal, that He has intelligence and will of His own, no vague It or That or "All."

Then the Covenant God is one who takes the initiative. The Bible tells of a God who does not wait on a snow clad peak of eternity till lost mankind somehow breaks a trail up the vast ranges to His lofty throne. It tells of a God who walks in the valley of the shadows, seeking men. All religions have gods, some of them very "high and lifted up"; but only the Bible reveals the true God, whose mercy does not have to be bought or coaxed, but a God who approaches man in mercy, a God who is all-giving Love.

* * *

God Makes His Own Terms

AT THE same time, God remains God. He is not on a level with man. He takes the initiative, but also He makes His own terms. We cannot dictate to Him. We cannot draw up our own contracts, so to speak. God made promises to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and we are "heirs of the promises."

But these promises are not promiscuous. To put it quite simply: God is not on friendly terms with every one. He is a friend to all who will be His friends. But with those who turn their backs, who go their own ways, who care little or nothing for His great purposes, who do not serve His will, God makes no covenants.

God's will is the welfare of mankind. God's will is the destruction of evil, the creation and triumph of good. God is light and in Him is no darkness at all. If we love darkness rather than light, we have no right to be called His people. We cannot call ourselves His people because we are Americans, or because we belong to some church; we can call ourselves His people only if our hearts are in tune with His.

Tasty Tuna Patties

The cook who can come up with a tasty tuna patty of melting tenderness should be revered in song along with the lass who could bake a cherry pie. For tuna patties, combining the delicate goodness of tuna flakes with seasonings and crumbs, are truly a gustatory delight.

This tuna patty, with velvety textured mayonnaise baked in should make the hardest-to-please man sigh with contentment.

Broiled Tuna Patties

4 hard cooked eggs
1 6½-ounce can tuna, flaked
1½ cups fine dry bread crumbs
1 tablespoon finely cut parsley
¼ teaspoon black pepper
1 cup mayonnaise
Lemon slices
Paprika
¼ teaspoon salt

Finely dice the eggs and combine with the tuna, 1 cup of the bread crumbs, the parsley, salt, pepper and mayonnaise. Mold into 5 or 6 patties, and cover them on both sides with the remaining crumbs. Broil under low heat until golden brown and heated through. Garnish with lemon slices sprinkled with paprika.

Answer to Question No. 1:

1. It isn't one nerve but several, each of which starts from the spinal cord, joins its fellows from other vertebrae and proceeds down the back of the leg. Sometimes an operation is necessary for cure of sciatica. Your doctor can determine the cause and then recommend treatment.

Answer to Question No. 2:

2. A baby born this year can expect to live to be 67 and his expectancy will continue to rise as he grows older. Thus a man of 40 today may expect to live 30 years more and a man of 65 may expect to reach 77. A child born in 1900 could expect to live only 49 years. Americans today can look forward to increasing their life span because of improved medical care.

Answer to Question No. 3:

3. Right or left, it makes no difference in reading, despite the old saying. Right-handed persons can avoid annoying shadows in writing, however, by having the light come from the left.

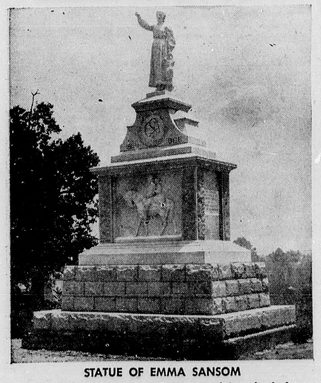
INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT ALABAMA



STATUE OF EMMA SANSOM

Emma Sansom was poor and uneducated but she had no superior in courage, and patriotism. She is considered a true heroine of the Confederacy. Colonel Abel D. Streight of the Federal Army had been ordered to cut off all Confederate supply lines to Rome, Ga. The course led through Etowah County. Streight destroyed the bridge after crossing Black Creek, but Emma Sansom directed Gen. Forrest to a cattle crossing in the creek by riding behind him on his horse. Federal bullets pierced her skirts but she was not hurt. Gen. Forrest overtook and captured Streight, thus preventing the Federals' planned raid on Rome.

When Westinghouse

Announced in February of this Year A Three Million Dollar Plant for Reform, Alabama They Said This

"Thomas W. Martin, chairman of the board, and other officials of Alabama Power Company, gave invaluable assistance in bringing the new plant to Alabama.

"We also are attracted by availability of the type of people we like to have as Westinghouse employees."

REFORM, (population 1137), a nice clean town in a rural area, had neither more nor less power than other Alabama communities of its size when Westinghouse selected it as the location for its three million dollar plant. But there'll be ample power for the Westinghouse plant when it opens its doors for 400 to 500 employees to go to work.

We are prepared to supply the power requirements, as needed, of the industries which desire to locate on our system.

Alabama Power Company industrial development engineers, in cooperation with chambers of commerce and others, regularly contact industries considering, or likely to consider, plant locations in the South.

About People and Things
By C. B. McDowell

COURTYARD IMPROVEMENTS

The shrubs which were set out in the couryard sometime ago are growing nicely but otherwise the yard is greatly in need of improvement. The bare parts are anything but attractive and when it rains pedestrians find the muddy approaches to the sidewalks quite annoying.

HAY PRICES BREAK RECORD

Hay prices are said to be higher in this area than for many years. Thirty dollars per ton is the pervailing price for peanut hay. It was about a third of that last fall.

PROUD OF FISH PONDS

Ben F. Brunson is justly proud of his two fish ponds. He has one in his back yard on the Troy highway. It is literally alive with blue gill bream and trout of all sizes. He has them well-trained and they fairly swarm to meet him when he goes to the bank with food. The pond is fertilized and the fish are making rapid growth.

The other pond is located on his 160-acre tract extending from the Troy to the Brantley highway. It covers about four acres and is well-stocked. It 's just north of Evergreen cemetery. Picnic grounds are located on the south bank of the pond and a shelter has been constructed to protect picknickers from the weather. Mr. Brunson said he has not determined how he will regulate fishing in the pond when it is opened up.

HOME BEING BUILT

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Boswell are erecting an attractive home on Sunset Boulevard. It is of frame construction and consists of two bedrooms, living room, kitchen, den, breakfast nook and two baths. A feature of the house is a very large plate glass window and extra large closets. The house will be modernly equipped.

APPRECIATION DAY PAYING

Appreciation Day, sponsored by Elba merchants and business people, continues to grow in popularity in the trade territory. Each Saturday large crowds gather in front of Elba theater to share in the liberal prizes given. Merchants say it is stimulating trade.

WRITES FROM GERMANY

Mr. and Mrs. William Bulard recently received a letter from their son and daughter-in-law Mr. and Mrs. Lamar Bullard, who are stationed in Germany. They ask their parents to send them several varieties of garden seed. They said that they are living in an apartment and have space for a good garden. They have moved twice since being in Germany and said they are not more than 50 miles from the Russian zone. They have experienced no trouble from the Communists. The letter contained a photo of two German-made Fords which are different than the American vintage.

FISH WETS FISHERMEN

Messers C. O. Allred and Charles Lindsey report that they caught a trout weighing five ponds and 10 ounces in Moody's Lake below Elba Friday. Mr. Allred said he was paddling the boat and had gone around the lake two or three time without a sign of a fish when suddenly a trout struck Mr. Lindsey's top plug and a battle royal was on. Before the beauty was landed he gave both fishermen a good shower. They said another good trout came to the surface and made the water boil but would not strike.

KILLS TWO LARGE RATTLERS

Steve Spurlin reports that he killed two of the largest rattlesnakes he ever saw recently near the old Cooper sawmill up Pea River. He said when cut one of them open it was full of little snakes so the slaying exterminated a whole colony of rattlers.

BETTY JANE SAWYER NAMED COFFEE COUNTY MISS F. H. A.

Miss Betty Jane Sawyer of New Brockton was named Miss F. H. A. of Coffee County last Tuesday night in Enterprise. She competed against Martha Jean Padgett of Elba.

$30,000 in Bonds to Be Floated by Elba For Paving Streets

At a meeting of the City Council Monday evening it was decided to float $30,000 worth of paving bonds. Mills Thornton, member of the firm of Thornton Mohr & Company of Montgomery appeared before the council and stated he had investigated the city's financial condition. Elba ranks high among Alabama cities in its financial condition and his company will lend whatever money is needed.

The city is planning to make extensive improvements. This includes paving all unpaved streets where property owners are willing to share the costs. The city pays one-third while property owners pay the remainder.

Mayor L. P. Mullins said it is estimated that the paving will cost approximately $1.03 per running foot for paving 22 feet wide. To cover the city's part of the expenses, the council contracted to float a $30,000 bond issue. The paving will start as soon as necessary arrangements can be made. An opportunity will be given for property owners interested to file protests if they desire to do so.

Other city improvements under planning are two miles of new water mains, a water tower, a modern fire truck, construction of an office for the mayor and city clerk. The new office is almost completed. Six inch water mains have been ordered and delivery of the fire truck has been promised sometime in June. The city has been notified that the water tower cannot be obtained inside of 12 months. Additional bonds will be bought when needed.

40 Years Ago in Elba
C. B. McDowell

The most beautiful wedding of the season was solemnized Tuesday at the beautiful new Methodist church when Wayland M. Law led Miss Mary Mildred Dinkins to the hymaneal altar. The church was artistically decorated with smilax and Easter lilies and despite inclement weather, the wedding was attended by a large concourse of invited guests. Mrs. Eugene Hammond presided at the organ and her rendidtion of Mendelsohn's march was superb. Mrs. W. H. Edwards of Enterprise sang "O Promise Me," after which Messers S. H. Brock, Virgil Elmore, Claude O'Neal and Wallace Law, groomsmen, entered the church. Then came Mrs. John Bell, matron of honor, followed by Capt. S. C. Dinkins who gave the bride in marriage. Dr. C. L. McCartha of Troy performed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Law took the 12:30 A. C. L. train for their new home in Olathe, Colo. Mr. Law is the eldest son of Mr. I. T. Law of Elba and is highly esteemed in business and social circles. Mrs. Law is a sister of Mrs. J. D. Lee of Elba and has made her home here since the death of her parents some years ago, but was reared in Brundidge.

Mr. W. O. Vaughn made a business trip to Dothan yesterday.

Mrs. C. A. Costillo, one of Elba's oldest and most generally beloved ladies, died suddenly of heart failure Wednesday morning at the home of her sister, Mrs. V. J. Flournoy. She was 76 years old and had been in declining health for several months, but her condition was not considered serious. She was born in Lafayette May 1, 1835 and moved to Elba with her family in 1852. In 1855 she was married to the gallant Irish-American soldier, Judge P. D. Costillo, who was killed at Murfreesboro while commanding the 25th Alabama regiment. In 1853 he moved to Elba and later was elected probate judge of Coffee County which position he held until the breaking out of the civil War. He organized a company here and went to the front as captain. He was killed at Murfreesboro, leaving his wife and four small children. Mrs. Costillo had been a member of the Methodist Church for many years and her funeral was held at the new church, the building of which she had taken much interest. She was buried in the family graveyard on the old Lee homestead, four miles south of Elba. She is survived by two brothers, Pete and Ben Lee, and a sister, Mrs. V. J. Flournoy. Her four children preceded her in death.

NEARING COMPLETION

The new home being erected north of Judge J. A. Carnley's home is nearing completion. It is of frame construction and has three bedrooms. It is being built by Mr. and Mrs. Willard Martin and 'Shorty" is doing a major portion of the carpenter work himself. Mr. and Mrs. Martin are justly proud of their attractive new home.

The regular adjourned term of Chancery Court will be held in Elba April 21 and lawyers are busy getting cases ready for submission.

The courthouse in Geneva county will not be moved. Gov. O'Neal decided Saturday against the legality of moving it from Geneva. The law provides that no courthouse shall be moved within 20 years after it has been built, and it has been only 13 years since the Geneva County courthouse was built. Hartford argued that because the Geneva courthouse had been destroyed by fire, this provision of the law did not apply but the Governor decided the question against Hartford and the courthouse will be rebuilt at Geneva. We understand that a majority of the voters petitioned for the site to be moved to Hartford.

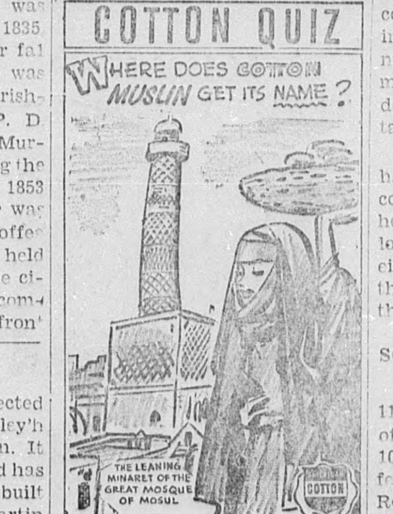
Messers W. W. Ham Sr. and J. N. Ham Jr. left the first of the week for Panama City, Fla.



City Receives $4008 From Electric Co-op In Patronage Refund

The Board of Trustess of the Alabama Electric Cooperative, Andalusia, voted to divide $75,000 in patronage refunds from the generating and transmission cooperative among the consumers receiving electric service from them.

The City of Elba, a wholesale consumer, was given a check amounting to $4008 by President Maury A. McWilliams and Manager Basil Thompson acting for the trustess.

Mayor L. P. Mulins stated that "the town of Elba is well pleased with the excellent electric service being provided by the Co-op for the past six and one-half years and that the $4008 would probably be used to provide a vital municipal improvement.

J. B. Rodgers, representative of the Covington Electric Co-op of Andalusia received a check for $11,168.25.
